To the Iowa State University Student Body:

Student Government has the honor of announcing an addition to our team. We are happy to announce the addition of an advisor who can provide additional guidance and leadership to a team that is determined to better the student body.

Alex Krumm has spent his time in college as well as after graduating from Wartburg College fostering meaningful relationships and helping mentor within these relationships. In 2014, Alex got involved with higher education while completing a degree in Organizational leadership, and he started a private leadership coaching practice helping young leaders involved with nonprofits.

This position of being an Advisor to Student government may be new, but we are more than honored to have Alex bring his extensive experience with college students, leadership, and creating meaningful relationships. We are extremely excited to see how Alex helps define this new role for the upcoming school year as well as for years to come. In order to get to know Alex a little better, we had the privilege to ask a few questions, here are Alex's answers:

What draws you to student government?

My passion is in helping leaders who do good to lead well. Advising student government is a great way for me to live out that mission. Student leaders, especially those in student government, can have an immense positive impact on the campus community and I want to help them to do that at a high level.

Are you involved at ISU in any other ways?

Not yet! Although I lived in Ames before coming to work at ISU, I haven't been very involved. I look forward to get more connected!

What do you hope to learn as well as teach in your new position?

I hope to learn more about how student government influences the community at a large university. My background has been at small private colleges and I am thrilled to be at ISU and see what the large state school environment is like.

More than just teaching, I hope to inspire people to lead authentically and grow in ways that set them up to launch successfully into wherever they are headed after ISU.
